Early Choice of Pursuit Will Aid in Intensifying Child's Current of Thought

Formation of Correct Mental Habits Recognized As a Basis of Education As Old Theories Are Exploded.

Vocation Series, No. 10.

By ANNA BOGENHOLM SLOANE.

(Copyright, 1915, by Miss Anna B. Sloane.)

EXPLoded is the old theory that the child mind, consisting of a number of more or less watertight compartments, called faculties, and that each subject included in the school curriculum is a pumpjack station for one of them. The other theory, that the mental power generated by the study of classics can be switched to the problem of making two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is beginning to be seriously questioned by the best psychologists of our day, and the formation of correct mental habits, as the fundamental basis of education, is becoming more and more insisted upon.

Human thought tends to run in the grooves it has once made. By jumping it too frequently into new grooves it is scattered; the brain becomes cross-fused with grooves of shallow depths, and an all-around, alert, no-account, mediocre mentality is built up. Those who have become great in any chosen line of work, or profession, have started at it early and have kept to one main line of pursuit, as their life work, with hands of receptive activities of opposite nature thrown in at proper intervals.

Early Choice of Pursuit.

For this reason it is important that the child should, at as early an age as possible, determine the kind of pursuit he intends to follow as his life work.

Peace

I pray for peace; yet peace is but a prayer. How many wars have been in my brief years! All races and all faiths, both hemispheres. My eyes have seen embattled everywhere. The wide earth through; yet do I not despair. Of peace that slowly through far ages nears. Though not to me the golden morn appears: My faith is perfect in time's issue fair. For man doth build on an eternal scale, And his ideas are framed of hope deferred; The millennium came not; yet Christ did not fail. Though ever unaccomplished is His word. Him Prince of Peace, though unenthroned, we hail. Supreme, when in all bosoms He be heard. —George E. Woodberry. In North American Review.

Ways to Make the Hair Curl

Quince Seed Bandoline, Gum Arabic Or Coconut Oil May Be Used.

By LUCREZIA BORI.

(Copyright, 1915, by the Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

YESTERDAY, a friend of mine dropped in for a chat, and I noticed she had changed the arrangement of her hair. I remarked how very smart she was looking, and how much the new culture had improved her appearance. Her answer was:

"I came here to get your honest opinion, and I'm glad you think this arrangement of my hair is becoming. Do you know that I spend a small fortune every week having my hair waved? I looked like a freak with it at school back without a remnant of a curl. You know my hair is naturally straight, and when I try to wave it, myself it gets too frizzy. Instead of lying flat against the head in soft, broad undulations it stands out as if each hair was wired."

"I've been wondering if you know of a preparation that will keep the hair in curl for while. I could have waves my hair, and then the slightest dampness would not rob me of my wave. I suppose there isn't any treatment of which you know that will give a permanent wave to the hair if it isn't inclined to curl naturally."

I told her everything I knew regarding curling fluids and methods of waving the hair, and in answer there are others who are voicing the same questions. I shall repeat the information I gave her.

There is nothing that will give a permanent natural wave to the hair. Curly hair grows from the scalp in an entirely different shape than straight hair. There is, however, a process which reliable hairdressers are using that is guaranteed to wave the hair for six months. The price asked to acquire this asset to beauty will prevent many of us from having a permanent wave put in our tresses.

Bruised Quince Seeds.

The next best method of curling the hair is to use a lotion that will keep the wave from disappearing when exposed to dampness.

Of all the preparations I know the most effective and the easiest for amateurs to make is a bandoline made from bruised quince seed. This curling lotion has been in use for generations, and our grandmothers used nothing else when they wore the ringlets about the forehead or curls falling in cascades over the ears or the back of the head.

To prepare this lotion, take a tablespoonful of bruised quince seeds and pour over them a pint of soft water. Boil slowly until the quantity is reduced to three gills. Allow the liquid to cool and then strain through a cloth. Add two teaspoonfuls each of cologne and alcohol, and the mixture is ready for use.

Moisten the hair with this preparation before curling, using a small sponge to apply it.

If you are successful in waving your hair with curlers, use the lotion before winding the strands of hair about the curlers.

There is one small objection to this curling fluid; when it becomes dry it assumes a powdery form suggesting fine dandruff. But it is easily brushed from the hair and is absolutely harmless.

Another compound which acts as a curling fluid and imparts a luster to the hair and is made of the following ingredients:

Gum arabic.....14 ounces

Rosewater.....1 gill

Divide the gum arabic in the rosewater, strain through muslin, and add a drop of aniline dye.

Oil Makes Hair Curly.

I do not admire heavy, oily hair, but I sometimes think that if the hair is inclined the slightest bit to be wavy a little oil applied to it would make it curl.

It is, I know, the common idea that dry hair will curl better than that which is oily. This is a mistake.

You have all noticed that some straight hair shows an inclination to curl when the weather is damp. The dampness gives the hair a slight weight, and I believe on the same principle that if oil in small quantities is applied to the hair it will curl.

Sweet almond or coconut oil, scented with a favorite perfume, will answer the purpose. Apply the oil with the palms of the hands three or four times a week.

After using the oil, divide the hair in soft waves, plaiting them into position with invisible hairpins if necessary.

Tie a thin veil about the head and do not remove it until you are ready to go out. Hair once trained in the habit of waving will be much easier to manage than when it is straight.

Dame Fashion Returns to Days Of Crinoline In "Eugenie" Costume

Quaint Styles of 1840, With Ample Skirts, Widening Sleeves, and Tassels Are Among Novelties of Old-fashioned Frock of Blue and White Taffeta.

DAME FASHION went straight back to crinoline days when she designed this old-fashioned frock of blue and white checked taffeta. Then, because it was so fascinating and lovely she called it the "Eugenie" after the beautiful empress who ruled the world of fashion as well as France during the second empire.

It does not require a great stretch of the imagination to picture how the belle of 1840 appeared in their wide skirts and poke bonnets with the present styles to aid us.

Modern designers have, if anything, improved upon the fashions of other days, for they have added little original touches which lift their frocks above the commonplace.

For instance, in this attractive frock plain blue chiffon has been combined with the checked taffeta to produce a charming effect.

The bodice is decidedly Quakerish in line and has a broad collar of white organdie about the pointed neck line.

The long sleeves of the chiffon gradually widen toward the hands and are finished with pleated frills.

The ample skirt of chiffon is gathered about the waist and has a deep band of the plaid taffeta extending nearly to the knees. Above this is a narrow band of the plaid, leaving about eight inches of the transparent material to show between.

To carry out the old-fashioned idea still further the trimming used on this frock consists of dark blue silk tassels. They are attached, at intervals, to the front of the frock in a straight line extending from the base of the collar to the hem.

The Victorian bonnet worn with this frock is quite charming in its simplicity. It is a light blue, with a wide band of the plaid taffeta extending across the front and side in a manner which suggests a garden path bordered with hollyhocks and lavender.

The parasol is of plain blue silk bordered with large white polka dots. Taken as a whole, the costume looks as if she might have stepped from an old painting.

The boy no longer looks upon himself as a failure. He has done something of which he is proud and which his teacher commends and when he finds himself able to do one thing he will think himself able to do other things. That boy who was a failure is a success. A third class physician is a failure.

Dear Annie Laurie: I am a young girl and go to the skating rink quite often. A few weeks ago I was introduced to a young man whom I liked very much. He would meet upon skating with him quite a number of times and he seemed to like me very much. I have not said anything to him about it, because I do not like to let him know that I notice it. I am sure he would be glad to hear of it. I am sure he would be glad to hear of it. I am sure he would be glad to hear of it.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

I do not want you to think I am crazy about girls, for I am not, and am very particular about the people I go with. I do not smoke or drink or have any bad habits. I have been in this town for quite a while now, but do not seem to get acquainted. I go to shows but not to dances. Do you think that if I learned to dance and took up smoking that it would hurt my reputation?

The best way to get acquainted with the young lady is to invite her to attend some paid entertainment. As you work at the same place, that will be proper, and if she cares to become acquainted with you, she will accept your invitation and everything will work out all right. As for the dancing and smoking, I am sure you will find that it is not injurious to your health, and the doing of neither of these things will hurt your reputation, but it would be foolish to start in to do things that you do not care for. Learning to dance might be a very good thing for you.
